To whom this may concern,

My name is Christina Davis, and I am a graduate student in the Educational Leadership Program, and this is a letter of recommendation for Dr. Sharon Ross, Ed.D., Assistant Professor at East Texas A&M, Dept. of Educational Leadership. I have had three courses with Dr. Ross, and she has been an excellent professor during my time at East Texas A&M University and has shown exceptional professionalism and leadership. Under Dr. Ross's teaching I have been able to gain the essential knowledge to become an entry level principal as defined by the Principal Competencies and Domains in the state standards as defined by the state of Texas. Dr. Ross has been extremely thorough and thoughtful, has shown content expertise and given practical realism that brought the theories found in the textbooks to a conceptual real understanding/meaning for myself and my classmates.

Dr. Ross leads by example. She models great leadership and coaches her students to have them to be able to self-analyze and reflect on their current practices and/or for future leadership situations or positions. Dr. Ross also doesn't hesitate to redirect and have meaningful, at times hard conversations to help her students grow and be able to advance to a better/new understanding of proper leadership. Through Dr. Ross's guidance and instruction, I feel well prepared for my upcoming demonstrations of learning and future endeavors as an Instructional Leader. With that, I highly recommend Dr. Sharon Ross, Ed.D., Assistant Professor at East Texas A&M, Dept. of Educational Leadership, for a tenure position because she is a well-prepared, strongly ethically natured, and passionate professor that shows great expertise in teaching new instructional leaders how to be great entry-level principals in the state of Texas. If you have any questions or need more information, please don't hesitate to contact me.
